At one of the smartest weddings of the season Miss Rebecca Fiske, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. C. N. Fiske, became the bride of Ens. Arnold Frederic Schade, U. S. N., Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock at an impressive ceremony solemnized in All Saints church. Rev. John Osborn and Rev. M. L. King officiated.

The church was beautifully decorated with green palms and salmon pink gladioli. A program of organ music preceded the ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father was radiantly lovely in her gown of white lace, made with a high neckline and long straight sleeves. The skirt fell in a short train in back. Her tulle veil was held to her head with a crown of duchesse lace from the wedding gown of her mother. She carried a shower bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley with a center corsage of orchids.

Miss Jeanne Wahlheim of San Francisco attended the bride as maid of honor. She wore a peach taffeta gown, trimmed with peach net. The tight fitting waist was made with semi low back and large net sleeves. The long full skirt had two rows of ruffles at the bottom. She wore a poke bonnet to match her frock and carried a French nosegay of talisman roses and delphinium, with a white doily back.

Miss Evelyn Rheingans and Miss Margy Elizabeth Collins of Fresno, Miss Martha Secrest of Santa Barbara and Miss Marjorie Stose were bridesmaids. They wore peach net frocks, made with the tight fitting waists and semi flare skirts with small ruffles. Their hats were of net to match their gowns. They carried French nosegays of pastel colored flowers.

Ens. Norma W. Gambling served as best man and ushers were Lt. (jg) E. A. Yancey, Ens. H. P. Rumble, Ens. T. A. Long, Ens. J. E. Owers, Ens. H. C. Rowe and Ens. N. W. White. The young officers formed an archway of crossed swords for the bridal couple to pass beneath.

The bride's mother wore a pale blue lace gown with blue hat and corsage of orchids and lilies of the valley.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The young couple has left for New London, Conn., where they will make their home.

For her going away outfit the bride wore a smart brown silk suit trimmed with turquoise blue with blue hat and brown accessories.

Mrs. Schade attended Pt. Loma High school and Miss Wallace's school in Piedmont and the University of California. She is a member of Beta Sigma Omicron at U. C. and all of her wedding attendants with the exception of Miss Stose are sorority sisters. She is also a member of Zeta Rowing club.

Ens. Schade was graduated from the U.S.S. Naval Academy in 1933.

12 YEARS AGO

June 1923 in the Ocean Beach News

The Board of Education decided to solve the school problem in Ocean Beach by constructing a building with four rooms for the eighth grade and for special classes in manual training and domestic science. (The school then included the 7th and 8th grades.)

A parachute drop from high in the heavens into the surf off Ocean Beach by Harry E. Young, famous as "Nemo," was afforded at the formal opening Sunday, June 25, of the regular summer season. An attempt to break altitude records without the use of oxygen tanks by a 16 year old San Diego boy was made at the same time. Big crowds attended and extra street car service was necessary.

Three birthdays were celebrated on June 10, at Del Monte avenue and Ebers street by three cousins, whose birthdays fall on the same day—Alice Cunningham, 10 years; June Evans, 8; and Marjorie Lou Kelley, 2.

Petitions were being circulated, plans were confirmed and preparations for the establishment here of a branch of a local bank were being made. However, the supreme court had not affirmed the right of a national bank to have branches elsewhere, as yet.

F. A. Rhodes, city manager of operations recommended that the city council grant a petition by Point Loma residents calling for the paving of Talbot and Cannon streets and the installation of an open pavement drain.

Laurence Eulberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eulberg, celebrated his first birthday with a party, and one pink lighted candle a top a luscious birthday cake. Among the guests were Maxine and La Verne Carl, Martha Burnett, and Phyllis and Phyllis Near.

The annual newshoys' picnic was held on Sunday at Ocean Beach, as provided by two San Diego newspapers. A field meet consisting of foot races, standing broad jump, running jump, tug-of-war, was billed as the main event. Later a pie eating contest was held.

The Board of Education at a special meeting on Wednesday, authorized the purchase of ten acres of land on Point Loma, south and east of Chatsworth boulevard, for the erection of a junior high school for this district.

The Merry-Go-Round at the foot of Abbott street had just received new music rolls including such splendid numbers as "Three o'clock in the Morning," "Down Yonder," "April Showers," and "I'm Hungry for Beautiful Girls."

DR. ELLIOTT G. COLBY REPORTS ON KIWANIS CONVENTION

Dr. Elliott G. Colby, president of San Diego Kiwanis club, was the speaker at Ocean Beach Kiwanis at Wednesday noon, the first luncheon to be given this year by the Woman's club. Dr. Colby stated that 179 Kiwanians were aboard the special train carrying delegates from this district to San Antonio for their convention on May 19th to 23rd. He said the train trip was indeed enjoyable, as much entertainment and fun being had on the train as at the convention. En route the Kiwanians visited Juarez, Mexico, and the Carlsbad Caverns. The caverns he said were well worth anyone's time and a great deal of pleasure was had on the trip to the "big room" when all lights were extinguished and they were left in uttermost darkness deep down in the earth. San Antonio was said to have 290,000 population of which less than 100,000 are white people, the balance being Mexicans. The first evening there the convention delegates were entertained at a religious festival at Breckenridge park. The following days were given over to business of Kiwanis International. The California-Nevada district Dr. Colby said was the most outstanding in many accomplishments and took more honors than any other section of the continent. His belief was that Irving Fisher of Yale was their most interesting speaker. The next Kiwanis International convention will be at Washington, D. C.

Richard E. Bechtel, 7, of 4812 W. Pt. Loma Blvd. was drowned Saturday afternoon when he fell off his parents' houseboat into the bay.

Richard, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Bechtel, was playing with his cousin, Muriel Brent, 10, on the houseboat behind his home when he fell into the water. Efforts of his cousin to pull him out proved futile.

The body was recovered after it had been in the water about half an hour, police reported. Efforts of Dr. John Wilhoit and the Ocean Beach police first aid squad to revive the child failed.

Acting Manager Advises Against City Buying Pier

Crystal pier at Pacific Beach should not be purchased by the city because the eastern half of the structure probably would have to be rebuilt soon, Acting Manager Lockwood reported to the city council Tuesday.

Lockwood reported that the east 410 feet of the pier, the part next to the shore line, is supported by the original piling which is showing signs of deterioration. The outer part, 540 feet, is in good shape, he said.—Union.

THE DOG IN THE MANGER

At an impromptu meeting held last Tuesday before the city council it was decided to put the matter of the purchase of the Pacific Beach fishing pier over until budget time. A small group of Ocean Beach malcontents appeared in the morning and put up the plea that if a pier was not built first at Ocean Beach they did not want to see a pier built anywhere—and the council listened to them.

Half Million See Expo In First 18 Days

SAN DIEGO, Calif., June 16—As the half-millionth visitor today passed thru the gates of the World's Fair, after its initial 18 days, Zack J. Farmer, managing director, announced that the California Pacific International Exposition is complete in every detail. The Exposition now starts on its run thru America's vacation period, during which it scheduled to entertain millions of visitors.

Dedication and official opening of the great display in the Water Palace, today at 1 p. m., was the final gesture indicative of the completion of a construction feat unparalleled in the history of world's fairs.

Dedication of the huge exhibit in the Water Palace by the Los Angeles Municipal Water Bureau, Metropolitan Water District and the All-American Canal Association was deferred only because of the effort required adequately to depict the dramatic story of water in the Southwest.

Now the Exposition, like a gracious hostess, is receiving the first wave of the millions of visitors from all parts of the nation and abroad, which railroads, travel agencies, air lines, motor coach systems and steamship lines long have been preparing to bring here.

Travel agencies had advised Farmer, he said, to expect the beginning of heavy travel flow from the east and north about the end of June. But the migration westward has already started over regular travel lanes, supplemented by thousands of autos.

SCHOOL IS OUT

For thousands of young men and women in California, school is out, now, forever.

Graduation exercises thruout the state during the past fortnight have sent throngs of them into the battle of life on their own. The sequestered peace, the carefree joyousness is gone, and they are left to face the discordant music of a maladjusted world.

Industry may not yet be ready to absorb them, but it has speeded up considerably since the dark days of mid-depression; unemployment is on the wane in California, and more than one economist is predicting the greatest American "boom" man has ever known. Unquestionably, better times are on the way.

It will remain for these youths to shape the future of California and the nation. Among the ever-shifting confusion of social theories and governmental hypotheses, will they choose to remain individuals in a democracy, or to become a colorless mass, watched over and cared for by a paternal government?

The former course will be open, in spite of the extremes in social security legislation (which in a limited degree may be beneficial), that some people are demanding.

Instead of a guarantee of a bare living, by decree, these young people may rely on their own energy and ingenuity for an abundant living. Instead of relying entirely on certain grants to sustain them in declining years, they may call upon what they have themselves stored away in life insurance, perhaps, or in annuities specifically fashioned to yield sustenance when one can no longer work.

These youths just beginning to come to grips with life's realities will probably choose democracy and individualism. After all, the heritage that the pioneers left to California cannot have faded so soon.

PRESIDENT STIRS NATION BY PROPOSAL FOR A CHANGE IN ITS BASIC LAW.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
© Western Newspaper Union.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has created a major issue for the campaign of 1936 and stirred up widespread debate and controversy over a question that the nation had thought was settled in its early days. Furthermore, it is likely he has started the movement for a complete realignment of political forces into what will be virtually two new parties. Briefly, he proposes that the Constitution be changed to take from the states and give to the federal government power over the chief social and economic questions so that the New Deal may be saved from the doom pronounced upon it by the Supreme court.

In the course of a two hour talk with the Washington correspondents the President sent up a trial balloon on the plan he had conceived for remodeling the government to fit his program, declaring that he favored curtailing the sovereignty of the states and giving the central government full control over agriculture, industry, commerce and all other occupations and enterprises. He said this question of amending or re-writing the Constitution must be settled by a vote of the people. In some ways, he said, the Supreme court decision was the best thing that could have happened to the country because it clarified the issue as he presented it. The issue must be met by moving one way or the other, he said, back to the 13 states or forward to the modern interpretation.

We are the only country in the world which has not solved this problem, Mr. Roosevelt said. We thought we were solving it, but now it is thrown right back in our faces. We are relegated to the "horse and buggy" interpretation of the interstate commerce clause. That many prominent Democrats will be alienated from their support of Mr. Roosevelt by this pronouncement is certain. Already there has been launched a movement for those of the party who seek "a return to constitutional government" to unite with the Republicans who are of like mind. Its leaders are Bainbridge Colby, who was secretary of state in President Wilson's cabinet, and Chief Justice William R. Taft, of the Massachusetts Supreme court.

Mr. Colby has written to a number of Democratic leaders of national repute proposing they meet in a southern city, preferably Richmond, "to consider some form of political action that is for our country and above party."

In a letter to a friend in Washington it was revealed that Chief Justice Taft had decided to resign in order to join with other Jeffersonian Democrats to bring about a coalition with Republicans and the restoration of "constitutional government" to replace the New Deal.

Neither of these gentlemen hopes to prevent the renomination of Mr. Roosevelt, but they believe he might be defeated at the polls by a coalition movement.

Of Democratic senators a number, like Smith of South Carolina, Connolly of Texas, Clark of Missouri and King of Utah, frankly expressed their opposition to the President's views. Others expressed rather mild approval. All were surprised. The conservative Republicans of course were outspoken in their disapproval of the abrogation of states' rights, and the more radical men of that party were divided. Senator Borah of Idaho voiced the opinion of many others when he said:

"There is plenty of power, absolute power, to deal with all national problems. We don't need a constitutional amendment nearly so much as we need some one to draw bills in accordance with the Constitution. You can't draw a bill on great subjects of this nature as you would draw a resolution for a town meeting. Let it be understood that the construction which the Supreme court has placed on the interstate commerce clause gives ample and complete and plenary power to deal with all matters of national concern."

IT WAS said in Washington that the President and his advisers had decided on their course in reforming the New Deal but would not announce it for a time. Meanwhile, according to the story, congress will be urged to pass makeshift legislation, to reinstate the code system by voluntary co-operation of business men, and to treat the labor problem by a law protecting any state from goods produced in other states under labor standards below its own. The states will be invited to make their own recovery laws and the federal government will assume the power of enforcing them.

Statesmen are trying to devise some way of centralizing the government without amending the Constitution. One suggestion, approved by a good many, is that congress deprive the Supreme court of appellate jurisdiction in cases involving wages and hours of labor, production, and various other fields in which the New Deal operates.

Mr. Roosevelt himself says that the Supreme court decision by implication cast serious doubt upon the validity of much New Deal legislation besides NRA, notably the agricultural adjustment act, the securities act, and the securities and exchange act.

OFFICIALS of the United Mine Workers of America gave notice that approximately 450,000 miners in the soft coal fields would go on strike unless new wage contracts were signed before June 16. The members of the union were warned there must be no violations of the law nor any disturbances of the public peace during the strike. The entire soft coal fields of the United States is included, but not Canada.

A committee of the producers was trying to bring about a revision of the Gulfey coal stabilization bill, hoping this would prove a satisfactory substitute for the NRA coal code and would avert the threatened strike.

THERE was great rejoicing in Racine, Wis., when the strike at the J. I. Case company plants was called off after lasting 80 days. The employees accepted the compromise offer of the company, whose payroll has been the largest in the city. In general the demands of the strikers were not met, though the company agreed to certain raises in piece and day wages. It promised to re-employ the men without discrimination as business conditions warrant.

ACTING with surprising suddenness, the senate passed the Copeland-Tugwell food, drug and cosmetic bill, which had been modified to meet the objections of Senators Clark, Bailey and Vandenberg. Doctor Copeland said he believed it would get through the house without difficulty. President Roosevelt favors the measure.

The bill greatly increases the scope of the 1906 food and drug act. In the definitions of adulterated or misbranded articles, and provides penalties of a year in jail or a $1,000 fine for violations.

ONE immediate result of the Supreme court's NRA decision was the dismissal of 411 cases involving NIRA, invalidated by the ruling. This action was taken by Attorney General Cummings with the approval of the President.

"All of these cases related to the enforcement of code or similar requirements, violations of fair trade practices on the part of individual business or failure to live up to minimum wage or hour standards," the official statement said. "There are, of course, a large number of additional cases in every state in which actual court action has not yet been initiated. These also, because of the Schechter case decision, must necessarily be dropped."

Chester C. Davis, AAA administrator, in reply to inquiries concerning future plans as to maintenance of marketing agreements and licenses, sent out the following telegram:

"The Agricultural Adjustment administration has no thought of abandoning either its present program of marketing agreements for fruits and vegetables or its milk marketing plans. On the contrary, we are now working with congressional leaders on amendments designed to strengthen these marketing agreements and milk plans."

LITTLE George Weyerhaeuser, nine-year-old lumber fortune heir who was kidnaped from Tacoma, is safe at home, but the "snatchers" who held him captive for a week got away with $200,000 ransom money paid by the lad's family. They fled in a fast automobile, and at this writing are still at large, though pursued closely by an army of government agents and other officers. At last reports they were in the bad lands of Oregon.

FLOODS and tornadoes wrought havoc in Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming, Texas and Kansas—a region that only recently was afflicted by drought and dust storms. It was thought as many as 250 lives were lost, and great numbers of families were rendered homeless. The worst flood area was in southern Nebraska, where the Republican river was swollen into a raging torrent. Several entire villages were swept away, and utility plants and transportation lines were all washed out.

QUETTA, "garden city" of north-west India, and all the surrounding region were shattered by a series of earthquakes. The dead were estimated roughly at 30,000, but the exact number never will be known. The city and many villages were laid in ruins, and fire and flood swelled the toll of the killed and injured. The barracks of the royal air force at Quetta were demolished and more than fifty members of the garrison were killed. The city's police force was almost wiped out. While most of the victims of the disaster were natives, there were many English men and women among them.

BABE RUTH is out of baseball. The most sensational figure in the national sport during many years announced he had quit the Boston Braves, and soon thereafter Judge Emil Fuchs, president of that club, announced that Ruth had been released unconditionally. The Babe and the management of the Braves had not been in accord for some time, and the final break came when he asked for time off to meet the new French liner Normandie and was turned down.

GERMANY has no desire to deprive Great Britain of control of the high seas, but Reichsfuehrer Hitler does propose the limitation of naval power so that Germany will be able to cope with other continental powers. That was the message carried to London by Joachim von Ribbentrop, elevated to the rank of ambassador extraordinary, and Admiral Schuster. Hitler also sent his proposals for an air pact, asking parity with the strongest western power—France—and mutual assistance pledges in case of attack from the air. He suggested that air bombing attacks on civilian populations be outlawed.

Although the proposal calls for limitation of air fleets, Nazi officials say that they think the result will be an agreement among the powers not to build further than they have already done and that it will not mean the scrapping of planes already built.

IN the honors list in connection with King George's birthday appear three names especially interesting to Americans. Dr. Allan Roy Defoe, the country physician who attended the births of the famous Dionne quintuplets of Callender, Ontario, was given the Order of the British Empire. John Macfield, the poet laureate, who once was a bartender in New York, was one of three made members of the highest ranking Order of Merit. Among the others who received O. B. E. honors was Edward Johnson, Canadian tenor who is now director of the Metropolitan opera of New York.

RUMORS that Vice Chancellor Ernst von Starckenberg had seized dictatorial powers in Austria or was planning such action were put at rest by his public pledge of loyalty to Chancellor Schuschnigg, given at a rally of the prince's fascist home guard troops. However, he made it plain he still hopes for a Heimwehr government for his country.

FIGHTING desperately to save the franc and prevent inflation, Premier Flandin of France staked everything on a demand that he be given dictatorial financial powers until the end of the year, and lost. The chamber of deputies voted against him, 333 to 292, after a dramatic debate, and Flandin and his cabinet immediately resigned. M. Fernand Bouisson, who was committed to the support of the franc, formed a new government.

SAN DIEGO'S beautiful world's fair, the California Pacific exposition, was thrown open to the public practically completed. Thousands of visitors moved along the ancient El Camino Real of Balboa park on the opening day and viewed with delight the handsome buildings and interesting exhibits. The climax of the opening ceremonies came in the evening when President Roosevelt addressed the throng by radio from his study in the White House.

The exposition has been built to be a symphony of sight and sound, combining the grace of nature and the cunning of science for the pleasure and edification of an expected tourist throng of 10,000,000 people. The show stretches over 14 winding miles of exhibits and pleasure palaces housed in buildings of delicate Spanish architecture scattered through 300 acres of landscaped gardens.

KELLY PETILLO of California won the 500 mile auto race at the Indianapolis Speedway, setting a new record with an average speed of 108.24 miles an hour. Clay Weatherly of Cincinnati lost control of his car and was killed.

JAPAN, ready to take control over more Chinese territory, delivered to the government at Nanking an ultimatum charging that Dictator Chiang Kai-shek, as well as Gen. Yu Hsueh-chung, chairman of Hopei province and commander of Chinese troops in north China, were directly responsible for the long list of alleged infractions of the Tangku truce signed May 31, 1933, marking the conclusion of the Sino-Japanese hostilities over Manchuria.

Dispatches from Tokyo said Japanese officials admitted plans had been made to include Peiping and Tientsin within the demilitarized zone, which at present lies north of the two cities. Threats were made to bomb and occupy both those cities.

Later word from Tokyo said the Chinese national government had yielded to all the Japanese demands and that an early settlement of this latest dispute between the two nations was expected.

ON THE arrival at New York of the heavy palatial French liner Normandie it was announced the vessel had broken at least two transatlantic records. She covered the 3,192 miles from Southampton to Ambrose lightship at a speed of 29.48 knots, the elapsed time being 107 hours 33 minutes. Her average speed on two days was 31.55 knots, the highest ever achieved by an Atlantic liner.

DR. ALAN ROY DAFOE, Judge J. A. Valin and Minister of Welfare David Croll of Ontario, guardians under the king of the Dionne quintuplets, put on a party for those famous babies on their first birthday, and there was a great crowd of visitors in the little town of Callender. But Mr. and Mrs. Dionne, resentful because the infants have been removed from their charge and home to a special hospital across the street, refused to attend the festivities. The five little girls, who are in good health and growing rapidly, were displayed briefly and were permitted to crow or cry into the radio microphone.

TREMENDOUS TRIFLES

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

TYPOGRAPHICAL ERROR

IN THE spring of 1898 a Swedish tailor in Berkeley, Calif., read an advertisement in a San Francisco paper that said "Tailors wanted for a whaling cruise in Alaskan waters." Some ancient memory of his Norse ancestors stirred in him. He applied for the job. A few days later he was aboard the whaler "Reliance" as she spread her canvas and headed north.

"Get aloft there and help unfurl them sails!" bellowed the first mate to Eric. "You go yump in the ocean," was Eric's calm reply. But before the mate's fist could crash into his face, the captain, Swedish-born and a kindly soul, interfered. To his demand for an explanation Eric produced a crumpled newspaper clipping and pointed to the "Help Wanted" advertisement.

"The newspaper made a mistake," said the captain with a laugh. "I wanted sailors, not tailors." But Eric didn't feel like laughing. In fact, he was very angry and only the captain's assurance that he could travel on the ship as a passenger until they put in at Port Clarence, calmed him.

When the "Reliance" stopped at the port to take on water and reindeer meat, Eric left the ship. In an Eskimo village he obtained a boat and started down the coast. At the mouth of the Sirocco river he met with three prospectors who had found a little gold there and they gave him a small nugget. A short time later Eric showed this to an Eskimo chief who pointed out toward the hills and exclaimed excitedly "Umalaktok, umalaktok emetna!" meaning "much more the same." The chief then took him up the river to where it forked and there by scratching in the gravel they were able to pick out large pieces of coarse gold.

At first this place was known as Snake river but later when a horde of frenzied fortune-seekers pitched their tents and built their shacks there it became Nome City. Thus a typographical error launched one of the greatest gold rushes in all history.

HIGHLY IMPORTANT COMMAS

A COMMA is only one of many punctuation marks and, except for the period, is about the smallest and most insignificant of them all. But put it in the wrong place and disastrous results may follow.

Once upon a time a misplaced comma cost the United States government the tidy sum of $2,000,000. The day might have been warm, the clerk who was marking the tariff free list might have had a headache, but whatever the details surrounding the incident, the comma got put in the wrong place. The clerk, instead of writing "All foreign fruit-plants are free from duty," wrote this, "All foreign fruit, plants are free from duty." Two million dollars worth of foreign fruit had come into the country and congress had to meet for the next session before this little comma could be removed.

Then there is the story about the Russian empress, Marie Feodorovna, Emperor Alexander III had imprisoned one of his political enemies. Then the empress accidentally caught sight of the following note, written by her husband on the margin of one of the death warrants: "Pardon impossible, to be sent to Siberia."

Marie had pled for the life of this subject. His wife was one of her childhood friends and she had done all she could to save the conspirator. Alexander could not, in duty bound, release the plotter, and the sentence stood until Marie transposed the comma so that it read, "Pardon, impossible to be sent to Siberia." The man was released, thanks to a woman's big heart and a little comma.

ACCIDENTS WILL HAPPEN

"ACCIDENT" is the mother of invention, 99 times out of 100," said Louis Brennan, the torpedo inventor. One day he saw a frayed driving belt on a planing machine acting queerly. He got the idea that it was possible to make a machine travel forward by pulling it backward. He made use of that principle in inventing his engine of death.

Careless workmen in a paper mill forgot, one day, to add sizing to the pulp, and the whole vat had to be thrown away as waste. A short time later the proprietor came by. He saw the discarded rolls and tore off some strips to use for making notes. It absorbed the ink as fast as he wrote on it, so he called it "blotting paper." We've used it ever since.

In another plant a workman playfully tossed a piece of cheese into the planing bath solution, used for producing copper disks for stamping phonograph records. The disks from this particular bath were far superior to any others. The casein in the cheese was the one element that chemists had been looking for.

A French scientist, while experimenting in his laboratory, accidentally opened the wrong valve. Several drops of moisture settled in a glass tube. Horrified at his mistake, the scientist was about to throw the tube away when he realized that he had discovered liquid oxygen.

Machine Gunners Fire at a Painted Landscape

MACHINE-GUN practice with all the advantages of open terrain and landscape targets is being accomplished at the Fort Wayne army post, Detroit, Mich., by using painted landscapes in a limited area. The range used is 1,000 inches, which corresponds exactly to the 1,000-yard range of open country. The gun crew's fix their sights and ranges the same as they would on a 1,000-yard range, and fire at landscape objects in the upper black and white panel. The lower colored duplicate scenes are to enable gunners to pick out their targets more readily.

Bedtime Story for Children

NANNY MEADOW MOUSE IS WORRIED

NANNY MEADOW MOUSE was worried. Yes, sir. Nanny Meadow Mouse was worried. Nanny is a home body. In the first place, most of the time she has a family to think about and care for. There are babies in Nanny's snug little home most of the time. What with helpless babies and headstrong, half-grown children eager to get out in the Great World and show how smart they are, and fully grown children already setting will risk her own life for her babies' sary risks. The most precious thing anybody possesses is life. To risk this for something which at best is nothing more than pleasure is the most foolish thing in the world. Nanny and how necessary it is that a young Meadow Mouse who would live to a good old age be carefully trained.

One of the first things to be learned is the foolishness of taking unnecessary homes of their own. Nanny has real cause for worry. You see, no one knows better than she what a lot of dangers surround a Meadow Mouse any time, but she is far too wise to risk it for any other reason.

"If you lost your life you've lost everything," is a favorite saying of Nanny's, and when you come to think of it, it is exactly so. Sometimes Nanny Meadow Mouse laughs at her and tells her that the older she grows the more timid she becomes. That doesn't trouble Nanny at all. She simply babies all the time on his mind as does Nanny. So he has more time to think about himself and the things he wants to do. Then, too, the sharp little wits in that funny little head of his have brought him through so many tight places that he has come to think himself quite as smart as anybody else and quite able to take care of himself no matter what happens, which shows that he isn't as wise as Nanny, though it wouldn't do to tell him so.

The day that Danny took it into his head to visit the Smiling Pool had been a very trying one for Nanny. Danny hadn't told her where he was going or that he expected to be gone long. The half-grown children had

by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am a woman forty-three years of age and have never been married. A widower about my own age is madly in love with me and wants to marry me. I love him all right, but he says he is a member of twelve lodges. What I want to know is this: Is it wise to marry a man who belongs to as many as twelve lodges?

Sincerely,

MAY SOONICK.

Answer: There is no harm in it as long as you will be satisfied with him staying away from home twelve nights a week.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

What does it mean when you see a lot of letters after a doctor's name? Sincerely,

MEDDIE SON.

Answer: That simply means he got to where he is by "degrees."

Dear Mr. Wynn:

Do you think it is really true that women make fools of men?

Yours truly,

Answer: Some times they do, but some times it isn't necessary.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I met a fellow the other day and have since found out that he is an awful liar and is not thought very much of in our community. I am placed in a very embarrassing position. He has asked me to lend him $50, and when I asked him when he would pay me back he said: "I will pay you back in two weeks, on the word of a gentleman." What shall I do?

Truly yours,

IONA TRUCK.

Answer: Tell him you'll lend him the money if he'll bring the gentleman around.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

During a conversation, at a bridge party, some woman passed the remark that there wasn't any difference between a man and a banana peel. It sounds silly to me, but this particular woman is considered very bright, so no one questioned her. Have you any idea what she meant by comparing a man and a banana peel?

Yours truly,

I. BIDSPADES.

Answer: Her comparison was this: Sometimes a man throws a banana peel in the gutter, and sometimes a banana peel throws a man in the gutter.

More Than a Hundred but Going Strong

Mother's Cook Book

ENTREE OR MADE DISH

THOSE who plan meals are often confronted by the problem of what to serve to add variety, "pep," or to fill a vacant place in the menu. Something is needed that is different, tasty, while at the same time it fits in with the other dishes which compose the meal.

In bridge, when in doubt, lead trumps—in food planning, when in doubt, add a dish which appeals. The following are a few which may be useful; they may be varied by using different fruits or vegetables.

Orange Fritters.

Take one and one-fourth cups of pastry flour, two teaspoons of baking powder, one-fourth teaspoon of salt, mix well and add four tablespoons of evaporated milk and seven tablespoons of water, one beaten egg—beat until smooth, or about two minutes. Take two seedless oranges, remove all fiber and dip each section into the batter. Have deep fat hot enough to fry a cube of bread a golden color in a minute, then drop in the fritters, a few at a time; cook for five minutes, drain, sprinkle with sugar and serve.

Lobster Croquettes.

Take two cups of chopped cooked lobster, mix one-fourth of a teaspoon of salt, the same of mustard, a dash of cayenne and add to the lobster. Prepare a white sauce, using two tablespoons of butter, three of flour, one-half teaspoon of salt and a cup of milk. Add the cooked white sauce to the lobster, mold into balls when well chilled and fry in deep fat, using a hotter fat than the above. Forty seconds for the browning of the bread is the right amount. Serve with tatar sauce.

Mushrooms on Toast.

Cook mushrooms in butter for five minutes, add cream and seasoning and pour over well buttered toast. Serve at once.

Tunic Frock

For a hot day at the office this short sleeved tunic frock is very chic. When the tweed-patterned navy and white tunic coat is removed, it shows a one-piece dress of crossbarred white crepe.

Lobster Traps

Lobster traps are usually 3 or 4 feet long and capable of containing a number of lobsters. They are set in water ranging from 5 to 30 fathoms or even more, and are visited every two or three days, if the weather permits. From the traps the lobsters are taken to floating cages, called cars, where they are kept until enough are gathered to warrant a shipment.

HAUNTED CATHEDRAL

Recent revelations that all castles in England have ghosts has led to the discovery that famous St. Paul's cathedral in London also has one. He is described as a short, elderly gentleman with peculiar green eyes, and is supposed to be night watchman in the "whispering gallery." If he can attract your attention he will take you 627 steps heavenward to the ball just below the cross. It is related, and, once inside the small chamber, he will take a convex mirror from his pocket, having around its edges mystic symbols, and place it in the center of the ball. If you are bold enough to peer into the mirror you will see the face of the next member of your family who is about to depart for the unknown shores—at least, that is the story.

THE VOTER'S DUTY

Everytime you complain or find fault of government, whether Federal, State or your own municipality, remember that a portion of the blame is on yourself, if you are a voter. Every voting individual is a part of his government. Our activities in public office are a reflection of the voter pure and simple; it is mass thinking in action. Maybe we have been placing too much expectancy on government and its legislation. Men in public office, who frame and pass laws first of all, are elected by the people; their activities are not always friendly to the masses, but you and not the government are the one who put them into office.

There is going to be greater necessity than at any time in the history of the United States, for sending capable, honest and sincere representatives to Washington at the next Presidential election. As long ago as George Washington's day, he made it most emphatic by saying that Congressmen should be men who have a perfect understanding of the Constitution of our country, of its policy and interests. Are there any such men in Congress today? Here is a reminder, and if the voters expect to heed advice from the Father of our Country, it is up to everyone to delegate such men who will turn the searchlight on worthy men and give them the test under the refining fire of honest government and conscientious principles and integrity.

Lovers of literature, who have become judges of good English and interesting subjects, will tell you that the Bible is a masterpiece of romance, including the best of inspired writers. There are short utterances, stories, narratives and tales that have beautiful meaning, education and entertainment. The true story of Noah, the narrative of Jonah, or Ruth and Naomi; these and others are foremost chapters that interest and entertain, say nothing about the religious influence they carry. The Book of books is not only the best seller, but it is the only book that is never out of print, written in language that every tongue can speak and understand with winning interest. Altho it is only a year since the Bible was translated into the language of the Afrikaans, 250,000 copies have been sold in South Africa. As many as 10,000 Bibles were bought in a single week. About 250,000 other people of the erstwhile Dark Continent will be benefitted when the translation of the whole Bible into Bayenda is completed. Scholars of the British and Foreign Bible Society have been at work for more than three years. For the last fourteen years the Bavenda, a tribe of northern Transvaal, have had to content themselves with the Psalms and New Testament.

Hanging in a conspicuous place in a room where many workmen are employed, is a sign with the one word, "Think", displayed in bold type. At first thought one might pass it by as being inconsequential, yet it has a valuable suggestion back of it, for all who come in contact with it. Think! Thinking is hard work and most people would rather do something else. Great readers are considered great thinkers, but how about the busy person who finds little time to read and digest what he reads? The man with a job, however, does get time to think, and it is one of the rare traits of life to become a good thinker. A good thinker may rise to the high rank with his employer by being able to think. Invention, hard problems, difficult situations, can never be solved unless one thinks out the solution. There is always a way out but it sometimes takes not only hard knocks, but hard thinking. To think well is a valuable treasure.

For incomparable bravery and malignant determination, those 67 refugee families recently transported to Alaska, are without exception, hero emigrants with a hope that success must come to them. Whole families are being housed in improvised shacks and the children, who work religiously with the parents, are "wild with joy". These lone, faraway settlers are subduing hardship, while the Government will play the part of big brother in ministering to their needs. Already there are 274 of these pioneers, and they say anything is better than a sandstorm. They believe that Alaska has a good opening for a new start in their industrial life.

In this day of intellectual advancement the average person should command a reasonable amount of good English to express himself. It is true that many times we expose our ignorance by the use of poor grammar; yet how many well educated people have a very careless regard for the correct language. Naturally the educated are in possession of more and better words with which to express themselves. Then there are people who cultivate good usage of expression thru well chosen words, yet they are uneducated but intelligent. A very intellectual person uses from 13,000 to 17,000 different words in his vocabulary. Shakespeare is said to have employed 28,000 words. This may be considered quite a fund of word value for anyone.

Humanity is growing more radio-wise as science and invention expands. As to how much the public gather thru information over the radio, as against reading newspapers, is not known, but the former has certainly won a fixed place in the home. The average broadcast goes into hundreds of thousands of homes. No wonder radio advertising is so profitable, as well as expensive. Broadcasting has made neighbors of nations and has united countries in both Eastern and Western hemispheres by way of voice communication. Since the wire photo has been perfected, pictures are made within a few hours, and broadcast to all parts of the globe. Truly we are radio-wise in an age of great advancement by scientific discovery!

Poets are born and not made, is an old saying, and it must be true; yet many a writer has put sentiment into verse and deny that they are poetical in any form. This does not mean that all poetry writers confess this, for some of the most egotistical will look you in the eye and at the same time tell you they are a literary success, writing verse. Poets have a wondrous gift. With beautiful words, attractively arranged and giving sentiments of inspiration, they can take us far from earth to the very heaven of delight. We fly with them on wings of fancy to the land of dreams.

Properly Lighted Streets Are Great Protection

Crime, particularly holdups, burglaries, and vandalism, is proved by statistics gathered from many communities, to be in definite relationship to darkness of city streets.

Many cities and towns, attempting to cut down the cost of municipal government, have tried the experiment of cutting down on the street lighting, either by limiting the number of standards in use, or by turning out the lights at certain specified times. The fallacy of such a course has been quickly apparent in the immediate increase in crime, traffic accidents, and all kinds of vandalism.

Darkness is the greatest ally of the criminal. Under its protection he moves about unmolested, breaking into homes or slugging the belated wayfarer, with little fear of detection or capture. The economic loss to these communities within a few hours may cost more than lighting over a long period.

Good street lighting is encouraged by every police department as it is well known that only the boldest and most desperate criminal will attack in well lighted areas, or by day. A check of several cities having lighting below minimum standards, showed that from 95 to 98 percent of the crimes were committed at night. Available statistics show a 10 percent decrease in crime upon installation of adequate street lighting.

Protection from criminals is one of the reasons for the existence of organized society. People pay taxes to obtain this protection, adequate street lighting being recognized as of equal importance even with the police department of any community in preventing crime. It is obviously one of the benefits that should be paid for by the taxpayers' money.

Police departments all over the country have gone so far as to advise every householder to maintain porch lights both in the front and the rear of his home as an additional element of protection. The burglar, the arsonist, or any other criminal, will shun the home that has lighted porches and areaways.

A SIMPLE, easily improvised device is helpful in isolating noises made by the various parts of the automobile engine, and in spotting trouble due to worn bearings, worn valve springs or loose timing gears. A long screw driver and a tin can with one open end are all that are needed. Touch the screw driver to the various parts of the engine, holding the bottom of the can against the handle of the screw driver and listening at the open end of the can. The device provides an effective engine stethoscope.

The old grease in the steering-gear housing ought to be flushed out periodically. If there is no drain plug, a quart of hot cylinder oil slowly pumped into the housing and allowed to run out of the filler plug, will cause most of the grease to dissolve and flow out with the oil.

NATIONAL LAMB WEEK NOW BEING OBSERVED

Mary, it seems, will not be the only one to have a little lamb this week.

As a matter of fact, the dates from June 17 to 22 have been selected for National Lamb Week in Safeway-MacMarr stores—and it is expected that several hundred thousand pounds will move to market as a result. Many sheep-raisers in this area will benefit from the event.

Started four years ago at a time when the sheep industry faced ruin because of weather and marketing conditions, the event has proved a vital aid to growers throughout the western states. Each year since 1931 it has moved thousands of lambs into consumers' hands and brought ready cash for producers.

The event gives house-wives an opportunity to get the choicest lamb in a wide variety of cuts. Chops and roasts are particularly delicious at this time of the year, according to Safeway-MacMarr officials, and the current price for lamb is especially attractive in comparison with the cost of other quality meats.

CHANGES URGED IN BANKING BILL

Business Men and Bankers Agree in Objecting to Political Control Over Banks.

AMENDMENTS ARE SUGGESTED

Political Domination of Federal Reserve Board Declared to Be Undesirable for Depositors as Well as Their Banks.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Business men and bankers alike who have appeared before committees of Congress to present views regarding the Banking Act of 1935 have found common cause for criticism in those provisions which they agree would create the means for undesirable political control over the Federal Reserve System and thereby over individual banks throughout the United States. They have made the point that this undesirable condition would affect depositors in banks even more than the banks themselves.

This view has been stressed in criticisms by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, and the question of partisan control over banking was the central theme of a statement presented by R. S. Hecht, President of the American Bankers Association, who appeared before the Senate Subcommittee on Banking and Currency hearings here. Mr. Hecht declared that his organization is actuated by a desire to be helpful to Congress "in enacting effective and workable banking legislation in the interests of all our people." He said in part:

"It is finally decided that it is necessary to carry this legislation through at this session, we are strongly of the opinion that special care should be taken to keep our credit control and banking mechanism free from any sort of political considerations.

"In making this statement I do not wish to appear to question the propriety of the Government's exerting a certain amount of control over banking operations so far as they affect the nation's currency and general monetary policy. Nor do we object to broad powers of supervision over the operation of our banking institutions because of the semi-public responsibilities they carry. But when it comes to such matters as the granting of credit and the making of investments by our banks, these are questions of business policies that surely should not be under the sole control of a board so constituted as to be dependent upon partisan or political considerations under any administration.

The Basis of Sound Credit

"The real conditions that create the necessity for the expansion or contraction of credit arise from the needs of agriculture, industry and trade themselves, wholly independent of the administrative policies of the party which happens to be in power. We feel that the financial requirements of the nation's business constitute a continuing economic process that is not related to political changes. The fundamental principles of sound credit do not vary with variations in public thought. All experience teaches that the quality of credit is sound only so long as it is based purely on the requirements of sound business. It is not sound when any other considerations or motives enter into its composition.

"The Banking Act would centralize in the Federal Reserve Board at Washington means aimed to control the supply of money in the country, which term includes the sum total of currency in circulation and demand deposits in the banks which become current through checks. The powers which it is proposed to give the Board are intended to enable it to influence the quantity of this deposit money through open market operations, the discount rate and reserve requirements.

The Need for Independence

"That is the reason why we are so strongly in favor of making the Federal Reserve Board a body of such independence and prestige that it would be definitely removed from all political thought, influence and dictation. Its members should be free to study and to act in accordance with the needs and conditions of agriculture, industry and trade. The policies of the board should have no reference to the politics or the changes in politics of the national administration.

"In our studies of the bank bill, we have been strongly impressed with the fact that it would set up a situation under which the Federal Reserve Board and its policies might be subject to control from the political administration of the country. In saying this I do not charge that it is the intention of the present administration to bring about any undue control over the nation's banking mechanism. The point is, that if the bill passed as now proposed, opportunity for control would be there for the use of the present or whatever future administration might be in power.

"Our criticisms of the bill are not aimed, therefore, at the motives of the present administration, but they are wholly impersonal and non-political and are aimed entirely at the basic principles involved."

Desirable Changes Proposed

Careful study by his organization, Mr. Hecht said, had resulted in a number of suggestions for constructive revisions in the bill which he submitted to Congress. On the other hand, he declared that many of the changes proposed by the act in existing laws "are of a constructive nature and should have the support of bankers, if the method of appointment and the tenure of office of the members of the Federal Reserve Board, in whose hands it is planned to concentrate greater power than ever before, could be so altered as to insure, as far as possible, the absolute independence of the Board from partisan or political considerations." He added:

Supreme Court of Banking

"Since the passage of the Federal Reserve Act over 20 years ago, opinion in Congress and among bankers has been striving towards the ideal of making the Federal Reserve Board a body of such independence and prestige that it might be described as the Supreme Court of Finance and Banking. We believe there is greater need now than ever before for realizing this ideal."

R. S. HECHT

Mr. Hecht emphasized that it is "the genuine desire of the banking fraternity to be helpful and constructive in making suggestions in connection with this pending legislation. The changes we are urging are we believe essential to the continued independence of the Federal Reserve System."

"We have made it clear that we do not object to a measure of public control in the national interest for proper coordination of our manifold credit operations," he said, "and we do not believe the sponsors of the legislation desire any political domination over these activities through our Federal Reserve System."

"Under such circumstances we feel that our recommendations should be favorably acted upon because they would enable the reconstructed Federal Reserve Board to function freely as a nonpolitical body actuated only by the dictates of sound financial and economic policies conceived in the interest of all of our people.

"The adoption of our suggestions would both place operation of the Federal Reserve System wholly and distinctly apart from the fluctuations and vicissitudes of political conditions and free from undue influence by banking opinion only. Such a solution would thus have a stabilizing and confidence inspiring effect on the entire business situation."

BANKS RAPIDLY REDUCE DEBT

Although the sum of $1,800,000,000 has been advanced to banks and trust companies by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation since it began operations in February, 1932, down to April 30, 1935, these institutions have repaid no less than $1,340,000,000, or more than 72%. This rate of repayment is reported as being considerably in excess of that made by any other type of borrower.

Loans were authorized by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to 7,396 banks and trust companies in an aggregate amount of $2,350,000,000, but of this sum $345,000,000 was withdrawn or cancelled and $140,000,000 has not yet been taken out by the borrowers.

Simplification of Bank Checks

New York.—In a bulletin issued by the Bank Management Commission of the American Bankers Association, plans are described for carrying on the simplification of bank checks, notes, drafts and similar instruments in respect to size and uniformity of arrangement of subject matter.

Detailed recommendations for this end were formulated by the association about ten years ago, the bulletin says, and promulgated by the United States Department of Commerce among banks, business houses using large numbers of checks, commercial stationers and lithographers. As a result about 85 per cent adherence to the recommendations was brought about. The present bulletin, which describes the standard specifications in full, is issued to maintain this high level of adherence to the recommendations.

National Bank Notes

Changes in our money on the scale of about $800,000,000 are now going on through the retirement of national bank notes. This is reflected in increasing deposits in the Treasury of lawful money to replace bonds held against outstanding notes which will require some time for withdrawal from circulation.

The change in the currency will require a considerable shift of bank funds in many cases, but it is doubtful if so large a volume of currency has ever been retired and replaced in any country with so little disturbance.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES
"Is the Universe, including Man, Evolved by Atomic Force?" This question constitutes the subject of the Lesson-Sermon on Sunday in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass. The Golden Text is from Revelation: "Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honour and power: for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created." The Lesson-Sermon includes these Scriptural selections from Genesis: "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. . . . And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness. . . . So God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him; male and female created he them." Among the correlative passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, are the statements: "God creates and governs the universe, including man. The universe is filled with spiritual ideas, which He evolves, and they are obedient to the Mind that makes them."

Methodist Episcopal Services

"Christianity and Completion" is the subject for the sermon Sunday morning at the Methodist church. This will be the last of a series of sermons being preached by Rev. Hughes on the subject "Religion for Today". The service will begin at eleven o'clock. The church is situated at the corner of Saratoga and Sunset Cliffs boulevard.

Advertising published in the newspapers of California received direct commendation from the Federal Housing Administration, Washington, D. C., in a letter from W. D. Flanders, director of the Field division of the FHA, to A. P. Giannini, chairman of the board of Bank of America.

Flanders made particular reference to the advertisement of Bank of America published within the past weeks in the daily and weekly newspapers of this state, which interpreted loans made by the bank under the National Housing Act in terms of the man-hours of employment created.

"You and your staff are to be highly commended on the splendid way this advertisement has been prepared," Flanders' letter said, "especially the breakdown showing man-hours employed."

"The interest and excellent cooperation shown by the Bank of America in the promotion of the Better Housing program is most gratifying to us as considerable credit is due the Bank of America for the success of this program in California."

"In behalf of the Administration, I wish to extend our thanks to you, as chairman of the board of directors, as well as to each and every member of your organization."

THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY: POINT LOMA

What is the cause of the great diversity and variety in the universe? Is it without reason? By chance? Why is a rose a rose, a horse a horse, a man a man, a god a god, a planet a planet, a sun a sun? Are the offspring of humans human, and the offspring of beasts beasts so merely by chance? Why does not the poppy-seed produce a geranium, and the fig tree bear apples? Why further, even in a single species or genus is every individual form different though similar? There are not two leaves of a tree that are identical. No two human beings are alike. Why is this? It is one of the key teachings of Theosophy, psychological as well as highly philosophic and scientific, that explains this. It is called the doctrine of Swabhava: the doctrine of individuality, of the essential characteristic of every individual seed that bestows the unlimited fields of space. It is a mystery teaching, suppressed when the Emperor Julian in the sixth century closed the schools of learning, which the modern Theosophical society is again giving to the world. It is one of the seven great Jewels in the Crown of Wisdom.

On this subject of Swabhava, W. Emmett Small will speak at the forum-lecture at Theosophical headquarters, Point Loma, this coming Sunday afternoon, June 23, at 3 p. m. Serious questions from the audience will be welcome and answered by Small assisted by Miss Florence Collisson.

SYNOPSIS

Matt Kearney, young American living in London, says good-bye to his sister Eileen, on board the Wallaroo bound for Colombo. The Wallaroo is conveying 42,000,000 in gold to Australia. Kearney meets Inspector Dawson Haig, of Scotland Yard, very much in love with Eileen. Haig is convinced opium is concealed in Jo Lung's warehouse. Called to other duty, he delegates Kearney, with Detective Norwich, to visit the place and find out what he can. While in the warehouse Kearney picks up a notebook. Yu'an Hee See, Chinaman, whom Haig has long been seeking as the leader of a band of international thieves, is at Jo Lung's. Discovering the loss of his notebook, he sends two of his followers after Norwich and Kearney, one of whom he realizes must have picked it up. Soon after leaving Kearney Norwich is murdered. Haig is puzzled over cryptic notes in the book, referring to stops to be made by the Wallaroo. While he is poring over the book, a monstrous creature enters, seizes it, and escapes.

It had been removed that night under the very noses of the police and was now safe from their curiosity!

In the luxuriously appointed little cabin of the cruiser, Yu'an drew from the pocket of his fur-lined coat a string of blazing fire opals, roughly threaded on waxed silk. He threw them around the long slender throat of his companion.

"Tonight, I can afford to be generous," he said. "They suit you, Orange Blossom, who are all fire and ice."

Dawson Haig pressed irritably again and again upon the bell beside the wicket gate of Jo Lung's warehouse door. His light blue eyes sparkled dangerously. Believing that the elusive Big Chief, having caused murder to be committed upon the person of a Scotland Yard officer, was about to elude him again, he was prepared to stick at nothing.

Then the wicket gate opened, and a neatly groomed and imperturbable Levantine stood before them, staring with apparent surprise past Dawson Haig and the detective sergeant to where a group of plain-clothes officers and two uniformed men might be seen in the narrow street.

"Good evening," he said, smiling in apparent confusion. "I'm afraid you have alarmed me."

"Indeed," said Haig. "I'm sorry. I am a police officer, and I hold a warrant to search these premises."

"Really?" the Greek exclaimed. "But on what grounds have you obtained this warrant?"

"Harboring a man wanted for murder!" was the grim reply. "Come on, Warrender."

Haig turned to a group of men who had followed him in and out:

"Along the yard," he ordered. "Bear to the left and you'll find a door. Through it and into the warehouse. There are five small cases there, consigned from Birmingham per R. M. S. Wallaroo to Sydney. When you find them—let me know."

"One moment!" Polodoss was the speaker.

"Well?" Haig turned to him as two men set off. "What is it?"

"Only this," the Greek continued smoothly: "Your suspect cannot very well be hidden in one of the small cases you speak of! And the door in question is permanently locked. The warehouse beyond is leased by Messrs. King. Are you sure, Inspector, that your warrant extends to their premises?"

Dawson Haig stared at the speaker. The official red tape which trammels the movements of an officer of the Criminal Investigation department danced before his eyes visibly, and he stifled language unsuitable to the occasion, as:

"H—I, Inspector?" came a hail from the far end of the yard. "There's a door here, but it's locked. Are we to smash it?"

"No!" Haig shouted. "Come back. It doesn't matter, anyway. They'll have had the stuff out by now."

In due course the search party reached that business-like office upstairs, and:

"You see," said Polodoss, smiling and pointing to a number of books open on the desk. "I was hard at work. The staff, of course, has been gone for hours."

Dawson Haig stared into liquid dark eyes, as unreadable as the riddle of the Sphinx. A sudden wild urge rose to his brain—to take this slimy hypocrite by the throat and to choke him until he coughed up the truth. But:

"I'll just glance over your accounts, Mr. Polodoss," Haig said.

Outside in the Chinese quarter, at four points unsuspected by the police, blue lights were burning, for no orders had been given to extinguish them. When, half an hour later, the search party left the treasure house of Jo Lung, Dawson Haig drew Warrender aside.

"Take charge, Warrender," he said, "and stand by. Wait for me here. I've bungled this job badly."

He set off through deserted streets. And presently he found himself in a dead little yard with three doors opening upon it . . . that yard from which the one who laughed, the Chinese woman, and two shadows had come out an hour before. All three doors were closed. No light was visible.

There was a constable on duty. "You're absolutely sure," Haig challenged, "that nobody has gone in or come out?"

"Positive, sir."

"Carry on," Haig snipped.

He suspected this to be the Big Chief's private entrance. But if he dared to force it he would be in bad trouble. He muttered savagely, and walked away.

The light of a gray dawn was stealing through the Temple.

"Well, Matt," said Dawson Haig, "you asked me to let you know, so you have only yourself to blame!"

Kearney nodded, smiling: "I'm glad you came. And we're both used to late hours. Fill your glass and go ahead."

"Comes to this," Haig continued. "I should have started by covering the rat-run out of Three Colt street. I only suspect—but all the same I'm moderately sure—that the leakage was there. But if King Rat is inside he won't get out! Every hole is stopped. Unfortunately, I think King Rat has slipped away again."

"The horror with the tusks undoubtedly followed you—God knows how—for the memo book. . . . Yes! stroke your throat! You are lucky to have one intact. Incidentally, so am I! Those cunning devils must have spotted poor Norwich for a police officer. They tackled him first, you see—failed to find the notebook, and then came after you."

Matt Kearney shuddered. "They were warned in some way, or Eddy would have netted them on the way back. These people are artists—one must admit it. That display of day books and ledgers was surely intended to lead up to the one entry—the one to which the Greek drew my attention."

"You mean the sale, some time after poor Norwich and I were there, of a set of opals to a mythical customer?" Dawson Haig nodded.

"For the considerable sum of two thousand pounds in cash," he added savagely. "Which cash, when I challenged him, the Greek produced from the safe. Infernally clever. Damnably, poisonously clever. I'm skirting the edge of this case, Kearney. I'm a thousand miles from the heart of it."

"Personally," Kearney confessed, "I'm very uneasy about those entries in the memo book."

"Not half so uneasy as I am," said Dawson Haig. "Something you have told me tonight has given me a clew . . . perhaps too late! That squealing laughter. It was the Big Chief you heard—King Rat! Any doubt I ever had about his real identity, you have settled! I know now whom I have to deal with."

"I'm afraid I don't follow."

"You remember I went to Singapore a year back? I was following a clew which I hoped would lead to the break-up of a big drug ring—and I knew

Kearney Nodded, Smiling.

(note this point) that Jo Lung was one of the group. They dealt in stolen property (and other merchandise as well). Guess where that clew led?"

Kearney shook his head.

"To the villa, or rather, palace at Johore Bahru, of the Marquis Yu'an Hee See—ex-admiral of China!"

"But you don't mean that he—"

"I mean," Haig went on quickly, "that he declined to see me. A highly furnished secretary informed me that his excellency had left Singapore two days before. He was full of regrets. Of course, I had no alternative but to pretend to believe the liar. And as I left the place I heard some one laughing! Yes! I couldn't credit it at first any more than you could! Then I remembered something. . . .

"The marquis had been shot in the throat just prior to the break-up of that old regime under which he held his commission as admiral of the fleet! His vocal chords were affected. The incredible laughter I heard was the laughter of Yu'an Hee See!"

"You mean that—"

"I mean that Yu'an Hee See is Big Chief—King Rat! And he was at Jo Lung's tonight. It was his memo book that you picked up. You have heard how it was recovered!"

"But what happened—in Singapore?"

Dawson Haig finished his drink and shrugged his shoulders.

"On my way back to Johore Bahru," Haig replied. "I was ingeniously lured into a Chinese 'bath of feathers'—that's all!"

"Bath of feathers?"

"Exactly, Kearney! It's too late to go into details. Incidentally, though, I got out again . . . and there was no possible connection between this dastardly attempt and my call on the marquis! I failed, old man—failed miserably. My name with the chief was mud. Yet, you see, I was on the right track. Yu'an Hee See was in Limehouse tonight. Yu'an Hee See directed the murder of poor Norwich! I know, now—because you heard him laughing. . . ."

"Good G—d! Haig! an idea . . . he may be sailing in the Wallaroo!"

Dawson Haig nodded—and grinned.

"I hadn't overlooked that possibility. Detective Sergeant Durham sails in the Wallaroo as far as Marseilles."

"I'm glad of that," said Kearney.

Haig stared at him hard, and:

"Most blandly," he said, "the Greek gentleman at Jo Lung's referred to their establishment in Stamboul, tonight. He was safe. There's about as much chance of getting justice in Stamboul as of finding a gold mine in Shoreditch. But the Stamboul branch, as well as that in Limehouse, doesn't deal exclusively in stolen goods, or even drugs. The marquis is interested in a third industry—possibly based upon Stamboul but probably not. Yu'an Hee See is the biggest slave trader in the East!"

Eileen, a light sleeper, was awakened by the revolutions of the screw of the Wallaroo. She jumped out of bed and peeped out across a deserted deck. That dreary panorama of the Lower Thames was slipping by, a drab and desolate picture.

She watched for a while, then closed the shutter and turned up the light. The panic of waking alone in that gray morning had left her. As she sat there smoking and reflecting upon a hundred and one things, but chiefly upon the problem of whether she should write to Dawson Haig, as she had said she would do, or whether she should wait to see if there was a letter from him at Marseilles, she became aware of something. . . .

Some one—some one who had a regular, heavy tread—was pacing the deck on which her stateroom opened. As he passed and repassed, she experienced a rising curiosity respecting his identity.

No doubt a fellow passenger, unreasonably awakened, as she had been, and who, despairing of further sleep, had gone out for a walk.

Presently she heard his returning footsteps approaching from the after end. She turned off the light, pushed the shutter aside and peeped out.

She saw the promenade—a big man in a double-breasted blue overcoat; a man who wore a bowler hat, and who glanced aside with what seemed like definite curiosity as he passed her door. He was fresh complexioned and had blue eyes—very friendly looking blue eyes.

There was nothing in the least degree alarming about him, except that he seemed to be interested in her cabin. Eileen reclosed the shutter and turned in. And Detective Sergeant Durham, noting that her light had gone out again, passed along B deck to another cabin which interested him. Opening a heavy door he stepped into a cross alleyway, then turned left into another running forward and aft.

CHAPTER IV

Some passengers on the night cross channel steamer from Boulogne noticed a gray motor cruiser which passed them in a dead calm sea about halfway across. Her extraordinary turn of speed excited their curiosity.

They must have been even more intrigued could they have witnessed the arrival of this mysterious craft off the French coast.

Stealing through the haze of a gray and cheerless dawn, the mystery boat edged in, point by point, in the direction of Boulogne.

Stern on to the flat beach it lay, showing no lights, its propellers turning lazily. Presently a boat came out from a shadowy inlet. Two rowers labored at the oars, and very shortly drew alongside.

Those five small square cases which had come from Limehouse were transferred from the motor cruiser to the boat. Orange Blossom then stepped gingerly into the little craft, supported by Yu'an Hee See, who followed her.

Finally came Jo Lung. As the boat swung away:

"You will receive your orders tomorrow," said Yu'an Hee See rapidly in Chinese.

A yellow face surmounted by a woolen cap peered down from the deck of the cruiser, and:

"I hear, my lord," the man replied, and disappeared.

There came a whirr of powerful engines, a deep forceful churning, and the gray streak shot away southwest, swiftly to be swallowed up in morning mist. The two rowers bent to their oars.

Some distance up the little creek a landing stage projected, and beyond might be seen the roof of a wooden hut. At this landing stage the party disembarked.

Yu'an Hee See stood staring out through the open doorway of the hut until the men had carried in all five boxes. A board was quickly piled up. Its removal enabled a larger section of the floor, a concealed trap, to be lifted. Rough wooden steps led down into darkness. The Chinaman watched the boxes being stowed in their hidden cellar. When the work was completed and all traces of this hiding place concealed again:

"Come," he said to the woman, "we have no time to delay."

Perhaps half a mile away, guarded by a clump of funeral trees, a small farm might be seen. The woman was ill-shod for the journey, and clung to her companion's arm, silent and fretful. Jo Lung walked behind.

They crossed a weed-grown courtyard. Jo Lung unlocked the door of a broken-down barn.

There, a vision of blue enamel and gleaming silver plate, appeared a large French touring car. Jo Lung disappeared into the gloomy shadows of the barn, while the others made themselves comfortable in the car. When Jo Lung returned, he wore a blue and white uniform with a smart, peaked cap.

"Paris," said Yu'an Hee See—"straight to headquarters."

"The fact remains," said Dawson Haig, "there isn't a scrap of evidence to connect the establishment of our friend Jo Lung with the murder! If we could have produced the notebook—it might have proved to be a hanging matter for somebody. But, legally, it's valueless as evidence."

Kearney nodded. They had just finished lunch in a Strand grillroom. He sipped his coffee thoughtfully. Two days had elapsed, and little or nothing had been done.

Dawson Haig lighted a cigarette. "That it contained valuable clues is proved by the steps taken to recover it. But these clues, or what you and I can remember of them, frankly convey very little. In the next place, I certainly had a glimpse—a horrifying glimpse—in your rooms, of the murderer of Norwich. But, as you have pointed out, my description might be that of anything from a ghost to a wild animal!"

Kearney laughed. "That's true enough," he admitted.

"You have seen the medical report on Norwich? The doctors agreed that he was bitten by long, curved teeth. So far, no one has been able to identify an animal possessing quite such teeth."

"In short, the establishment of Jo Lung with valuable property stolen from all over the world, with his so-called burglar alarms, and other novel features, must carry on as usual entirely undisturbed by Scotland Yard!"

He looked up, his keen blue eyes gleaming savagely across the little table.

"In spite of the fact that one of the most dangerous criminals in the world used the place as his London base, and that some hired killer of his murdered one of the best men in my department only two nights ago! Not to add that a consignment of drugs, which may have been worth several thousand pounds, was lying about there under our very noses—but, you may take my word for it, is there no longer!"

"That horrible laughter I heard would certainly point to the fact that Yu'an Hee See in person was at Jo Lung's on Friday night."

"I'm almost certain," Haig snapped, "he was on the dock when the crates were removed from the Wallaroo! He was the fur-coated man who slipped through the gates just before I spoke to you! He drove straight to Jo Lung's!"

He sighed, knocking ash from his cigarette.

"The remote possibility that he may himself be joining the ship at Marseilles, I have dealt with, as you know. Durham is on board. But his first message was admittedly not encouraging. It merely consisted of the words 'Nothing to report.' I take this to mean that there is nothing suspicious about the occupants of the cabins mentioned in those mysterious notes—"

"One of which is Eileen's!"

"I know," Haig groaned, "and I can't get that fact out of my mind. I have checked the curious entry relating to 'Suleiman Bey's.' Paris notified us this morning that there is a certain restaurant of that name near the Monlin Galette. I'm going across this afternoon. I should like to locate Jo Lung. The inquiry is at a standstill here. . . ."

The Restaurant Suleiman Bey, adjoining the Place Pigalle, seemed to be a quiet little place, with sleepy, curtained windows and a glimpse, when the door was open, of a narrow counter where Turkish coffee might be purchased by weight. Beyond was a curtained door.

The night was wet, and patrons were few, but presently two men entered. The one who led, a gaunt, pale-faced fellow, had something of the appearance of the traditional artist, notably a shock of graying dark hair, a small mustache, and a straggly beard.

Since real painters have long since fled that district, his appearance was no doubt illusory.

He was accompanied by a man who might have passed for an American tourist. He was buttoned up in a white waterproof, and keen blue eyes were visible through the lenses of tortoise-shell-rimmed spectacles.

"Nothing Ever Does Happen Here," Replied M. Ballon.

Apparently the artistic gentleman knew the place well, for he nodded to a stout lady who stood behind the counter, raised the curtain in the opening beyond, and the two entered a long, rectangular room.

Faded plush seats lined one wall, broken by a buffet and a draped opening. A number of tables were covered with check cloths, badly holed where cigarettes had been laid upon them; and a little stair at the further end led up to a curtained doorway.

Only six customers were present: four of these around a table near the staircase, two upon the settee. The new arrivals ordered coffee.

Their order was taken by an Arab waiter, very daintily dressed. As he departed, both stared without apparent signs of interest, about the room. The group of four by the staircase, three men and a woman, might readily be classified, in view of the reputation of the Restaurant Suleiman Bey as a meeting place of advanced Communists.

The two men seated on the settee were of a different type. One, a slight, dark-faced fellow, might have been a Portuguese. He constantly glanced with uneasy curiosity in the direction of the stairway. The other was a thickset, debauched-looking man of fifty-odd, smoking a dirty old briar pipe, who stared straight before him at the opposite wall. He might have been Dutch—or German, although, as a matter of fact, he was Scotch. He badly needed a shave; and except that he constantly ordered more brandy, his presence in such a spot seemed unaccountable.

"Nothing seems to be happening," said Dawson Haig.

"Nothing ever does happen here," replied M. Ballon of the Surete. "Plots are made and perhaps carried out, but as they are never carried out in Paris"—he shrugged—"what do we care?"

Early Settlements in Greenland

In the Tenth and Eleventh centuries Norse sea rovers, starting from Iceland, made small settlements in Greenland and pushed as far as the coast of New England or possibly Nova Scotia, in transient visits. But the Greenland colony was obscure, the country was believed to form part of Europe, and the records of the farther explorations were contained in sagas which were only rediscovered by modern scholarship. Throughout the Middle Ages legendary tales of mythical lands lying in the western ocean were handed down. The true discovery of America, as historically recorded, was October 12, 1492, when Columbus landed on the island of Guanahani, now identified with Watling Island, in the Bahamas.

Wheel of Mystery Quilt Picturesque

By GRANDMOTHER CLARK

This quilt dates back many generations and there are possibly several reasons why it is called the "Wheel of Mystery." Each 18-inch block is composed of 4 9-inch blocks set together in reversed color combinations. Two small blocks are light on dark material and the other two dark on light material. When the 18-inch blocks are set together, as illustrated above, you will see dark wheels with light colored material and light wheels with dark colored material. Count the circles from left to right in the above assembled quilt. The colors seem to reverse as the eye travels across.

When making the quilt use two contrasting solid colors for patches to get the proper effect. Twenty 18-inch blocks with a 6-inch border will make a quilt 84x99 inches.

This is one of the 33 patchwork quilts in book No. 23. All illustrated, with instructions, cutting charts, and showing different ways for assembling, will be mailed to you upon receipt of 15c.

WOMAN ADVENTURER

Dame Rachel Crowdy, the only woman member of the British royal commission on armaments, has had a busy and adventurous life. She was chief commandant of the V. A. D.'s in France during the war, and from 1919 to 1931 did valuable work for the League of Nations. She has been fired at by Chinese bandits, escaped unscathed from a serious motor accident in France, lectured every night for two months in a different town in the United States, and one of her hobbies is sailing small boats.

Work Piled on Teachers

Philadelphia high schools have become so crowded because of industrial codes that teachers are doing almost twice as much work. There are not only too many students in one class, but it also is found that teachers must regulate their courses to pupils of different levels of abilities.

Current rumor is to the effect that our fish story last week wherein Dick Cunningham caught a bigger fish than Pop Jackson did not quite satisfy Pop, now he is talking about having hooked a finny monster that would make Cunningham's 49 1/2 lb. bass look like a tad-pole. Pop is telling about having a fish on his line so big there was no chance to land it without capsizing the boat, so the accommodating fish swam over to the fishermen, leaned over the side of the boat and spit out the hook, so that he wouldn't pull Pop Jackson into the ocean.

MEXICO ON PARADE

Ellsworth Floyd Whalen

The United States owes much of its power and wealth to the Republic of Mexico. Every American and Mexican should study the history of the war between Mexico and the United States. In 1835 the Americans living in the Mexican province of Texas organized military forces and revolted against the Mexican government, creating a republic under General Sam Houston. General Santa Anna and his Mexican troops were finally driven out of Texas after several bloody engagements in the year 1836. The United States Congress adopted a joint resolution authorizing the annexation of Texas which that government promptly accepted. Texas was formally admitted into the Union in December, 1845, the huge Texan Republic territory being ceded to the United States for the small sum of $10,000,000, which was applied to payment of debts of the former republic. Mexico formally protested against the annexation of her former province to the United States but to no avail. The United States government decided to ignore Mexico's formal protest of annexation, so the American government sent Mr. Slidell to the Mexican capital with instruction to attempt a reconciliation but not to make any suggestion of financial reimbursement for the annexation of former Mexican territory; naturally, the Mexican government declined to receive Mr. Slidell upon his arrival at the capital.

The Republic of Mexico decided it did not care for Americans and their unusual habits so an order was issued by the Government expelling all Americans from Mexican territory. But the greedy eyes of the American government were not closed, and when they gazed upon Mexico's fertile lands, a desire to seize them was created. Accordingly, the United States sent General Kearney with an adequate supply of troops down to the Rio Grande country to kill Mexicans and unlawfully seize all Mexican territory that would be possible under the circumstances. General Kearney carried out his orders in a most suitable American manner; he took possession of Santa Fe and then proclaimed the annexation of New Mexico and all territory north of the Rio Grande to the United States government. In February of the year 1848, war was terminated between the American and the Mexican governments with the signing of the Guadalupe Hidalgo treaty. This damnable treaty forced the Mexican government to cede New Mexico and California to the United States in return for the disgraceful payment of $15,000,000.

The year 1853 reminded Americans that the United States and Mexico had enjoyed fairly decent peace for about five years, so the cry arose thruout America that it was time to send some more troops down to Mexico and steal territory again. American freebooters organized an expedition in California to invade the territory of Mexico's Lower California, but President Pierce of the United States warned all such groups that if found guilty of their plans, they would be punished severely. However, the politicians, heeded the cry of greedy Americans and so political pressure was used on President Pierce who weakened and sent James Gadsden to Mexico with plenipotentiary power to acquire more Mexican territory.

After negotiating with Santa Anna in Mexico City, Gadsden acquired that part of Arizona south of the Gila River, which constituted the boundary in the Guadalupe-Hidalgo treaty. In consideration of the Arizona land annexed to the United States domain, Mexico received $10,000,000 from the American government.

the Los Angeles county Emergency Relief Administration has spent many years in Mexico and knows the potential wealth of the Mexican nation. Addressing the Rotary club during observance of "Foreign Trade Week" in Los Angeles, Mr. McLaughlin said in part of his tribute to Mexico: "The country below the Rio Grande is a tremendous market. It should be the mecca of American tourists and a large part of the $800,000,000 spent in England and Europe each year should be spent in a great part in Mexico and South America."
Americans should realize that every dollar they spend in Mexico is used for the housing and feeding of the Mexican people in an indirect manner, while every dollar they spend in Europe and England is partially used for war materials in an indirect manner.
